There are five Great Lakes: Huron, Ontario, Michigan, Erie, and Superior. All five lakes are connected by rivers and straits.

The Great Lakes began to form about 14,000 years ago. That was after the Last Ice Age. Big sheets of ice dug huge grooves in the earth. The grooves filled up with water as the ice melted. Now the Great Lakes are kept full from rain, snow, and other sources like rivers and groundwater.

There's nothing like the Great Lakes anywhere else on Earth. They hold about 21% of Earth's fresh
