It didn't matter that Mei memorized her poem weeks ago. It didn't matter that she loved the poem. All that mattered was that it was poetry reading day, and she was afraid to present. She'd been losing sleep over it all week!

When Mr. Flores called Mei to the front of the class, her nerves spiked.

Mei took a breath and hunched her shoulders. But then her classmates' eyes fell away! The words came naturally!

She smiled and stood straighter.
