"Did you hear the myth about the giants that lived here?" asked Caleb. Aliza shook her head. "There's no such thing as giants."

"There could have been," Caleb argued. "My dad says they lived in the caves outside town. They were just like us! They had families and schools and everything. He even showed me proof! He took me to these trees that have initials and words carved into them. Some of the letters are even grown over with new bark, so you can tell they're old. They're all super high up! Twice as tall as an adult! And there's no branches to climb to reach them."

"That's a little odd," Aliza said. "I'm pretty sure it wasn't giants, though. You're also wrong about at least one thing. That might be a folktale or something, but it's not a myth!"
