back to their beach chairs, both girls emptied the sand pails to inspect their treasures.

Wow! Look at all the shells you collected! Cassidy said to Marisol. I could only find a couple perfect shells. You found tons!

Marisol grinned at her sister. That's the thing, she said. My shells aren't perfect. Most of them have chips and cracks and smudges of dirt. But they don't have to be perfect to be beautiful. I thought they were worth keeping anyway.

Cassidy looked at Marisol's shells in a new way. You're right, she said. They are beautiful. I'm glad you kept them.

Marisol smiled. Since I have so many, why don't we share them between us?

Cassidy laughed. Yes! I'd love to have some of your perfectly imperfect shells!
